Box No. III Non-establishment of opinion with regard to novelty, inventive step and industrial applicability

1. The questions whether the claimed invention appears to be novel, to involve an inventive step (to be non-obvious), or to be industrially applicable have not been examined in respect of:

☐ the claims, or said claims Nos. are so inadequately supported by the description that no meaningful opinion could be formed.

☒ no international search report has been established for the said claims Nos. -

☐ the nucleotide and/or amino acid sequence listing does not comply with the standard provided for in Annex C of the Administrative Instructions in that:

the written form

☐ has not been furnished

☐ does not comply with the standard

Section III.

- 1). For the assessment of the present claim 12 on the question whether it is industrially applicable, no unified criteria exist in the PCT Contracting States. The patentability can also be dependent upon the formulation of the claims. The EPO, for example, does not recognize as industrially applicable the subject-matter of claims to the use of a compound in medical treatment, but may allow, however, claims to a known compound for first use in medical treatment and the use of such a compound for the manufacture of a medicament for a new medical treatment.
- 2). Claim 12 relates to subject-matter considered by this Authority to be covered by the provisions of Rule 67.1(iv) PCT. Consequently, no opinion will be formulated with respect to the industrial applicability of the subject-matter of these claims (Article 34(4)(a)(I) PCT).

Section V.

D1 = US-A-3 644 353

- 1). The present compounds are characterised by the (Q1-4-substituted) benzylaminocarbonylmethyl moiety.
- 2). The closest prior art is seen in D1. This document, like the present application, relates to compounds having bronchodilatory activity. The compounds there disclosed have the same phenyl-substituted ethanolamine moiety as the present compounds. In theory, the broadest disclosure of D1 even includes the present compounds by indicating that the aralkyl group definition of R3 may be "substituted" which would include the present characterising group (column 1, lines 55-62). However, in view of the substituents specifically suggested there (alkoxy or hydroxy) it is believed that D1 does not fairly teach or suggest such a massive substituent as the present characterising group. The finding that such massively substituted phenylethanolamines are also bronchodilators is thus seen as being based on an inventive step.
